

DP3067W Supervised Theological Field Education

Offered: 2018: Semester 2
[Must be taken in conjunction with DP3069W in consecutive semesters ie. Semester 1, 2019]

Supervised Theological Field Education provides a framework for reflection, action, and the integration of learning. It takes a specific context of ministry and focuses on how the application of skills gained and concepts explored during theological studies are now being integrated and applied. Students are required to engage in a pastoral placement, approved by the Director of Field Education, for a minimum of sixteen hours per week for two semesters (the unit must be taken in conjunction with DP3069W in consecutive semesters).

Upon successful completion of this unit, it is expected that students will be able to:

1. Set ministry learning and personal development goals as demonstration of intentionality in ministry;
2. Articulate core aspects of their operational theology;
3. Constructively critique feedback from members of a congregation or agency;
4. Evaluate their ministry approach and actions with a supervisor, peer group, and/or congregational committee; and
5. Integrate personal theological understanding and their ministry praxis.

Prerequisites: At least one unit in each of Field B, C & D
Application and acceptance into the program is by the Director of Field Education.

Class Time: 12 weeks of group supervision sessions (two hours each)
12 hours ministry supervision
6 hours congregational feedback meetings
