- Session 6 8:30am – 3:00pm Tuesday 28 Oct

THE MASTERCLASS MODEL
This innovative teaching model draws two people into a presentation, where the group has the opportunity to observe an unchartered conversation around a topic. This is anticipated to be a lively and engaging theological encounter for all present.

RATIONALE
This unit theologically explores the nature and practice of pastoral care in the context of dementia, palliative care and end-of-life care. Focused theological input, case study analysis, peer reflection and practitioner insight will engage participants as they review their own practice and develop their own theological frameworks. The unit will consider the social determinants of health in Australia today and critique individual and corporate pastoral care responses. Drawing on recent theological, spiritual care and healthcare literature, participants will consider what promotes health and spiritual wellbeing in the context of dementia and palliative care. This theoretical and practical exploration will assume a multidisciplinary and multi-faith environment of ethical care.

PROGRAM OUTLINE
The unit divides generally into three focused themes – dementia, palliative care and end of life care. Throughout the course, however, you will be invited to consider these as both distinctive and overlapping concepts. While there are discrete factors in each to be mindful of, there are sweeping threads which continue throughout the course. In particular there will be an approach to the themes in the shape of ‘health promoting pastoral care’. Having a clear capacity for theological reflection throughout the journey is seen as a key resource for understanding and interpreting these experiences including:

- Memory and identity
- Hope and future
- Wellbeing and health promotion
- Community and belonging
- Identity and belonging
- Ethics and values
- Difference

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE
The regular post-graduate fee is applied when the unit is taken for credit. FEE-HELP, the Australian Government’s student loans scheme, is available for eligible students.
